

Indians on the Internet

Native American Annotated Webliography

The Native Culture site lists the home page of each American Indian nation/tribe, letting them speak for themselves on up-to-the-minute issues. It also includes other reliable sites about particular groups, all alphabetized by language and/or nation; you can find what you want quickly. <http://www.nativeculture.com/lisamitten/nations.html>. This would be an excellent resource for student reports on individual native groups.

NativeWeb is a project of many people, which announces, “Our vision touches ancient teachings and modern technology. Our purpose is to provide a cyber-place for Earth's indigenous peoples.” Includes Native Americans and others from all around the globe: <http://www.nativeweb.org/>

Read numerous articles, general and specific, about the Sports Team Mascot issue at <http://www.nativeculture.com/lisamitten/mascots.html>.

Native American Folktale sources:

<http://www.ilhawaii.net/~stony/loreindx.html>

http://www.turtletrack.org/CO\_Indices/CO\_Index\_Story.htm

http://www.y-indianguides.com/pfm\_st\_nativestories.html

<http://www.angelfire.com/ia2/stories3/>

<http://www.ocbtracker.com/ladypixel/legend.html>

or on PBS's Circle of Stories site: <http://www.pbs.org/circleofstories/> with fascinating background about several living traditional storytellers.

If your students are preparing a story to tell, get some tips at <http://www.aaronshep.com/storytelling/Tips.html> or

<http://www.eldrbarry.net/roos/eest.htm>

At the Students and Teachers against Racism site, find clear essays and explanations about timely issues such as Indian sports mascot names, Native American Heritage month, an Indian view of “Discovering Columbus,” as well as biographical sketches of famous Americans with native roots (including Shania Twain) and many primary source texts such as quotes, speeches, historical documents, and newspaper articles related to Indian issues. Recommended for teachers and secondary students, this site will give perspective to many contemporary issues.

<http://www.racismagainstindians.org/>